TEACHER INSTRUCTIONS

CULTURE SHOT

- Along with your students, define "culture." Ask them to brainstorm the images that come to mind when they think of "American culture" specifically.
- Invite students to each choose one New York Times photograph from today's Times that could represent present-day American culture.
- Once students have selected their photographs, have them explain their selections on the "Culture Shot" sheet and then clip them out and display them on the front board in a class collage of American culture.
- As a class, identify commonalities and differences between students' visual perspectives on American culture.
